

Have Fun With Artistic Balloons

Have you ever seen a bag of balloons at the store? Have you ever driven past a car lot only to find that balloons are on all the new car models? Have you ever gone to the circus and saw lots of balloons and lots of clowns making balloons? That is called Balloon Art and I will refer back to it later on in this article.

The History of Balloons

There are many different types of balloons. Balloons come in all shapes, sizes, and colors. There are different patterns of balloon colors. There are birthday balloons, balloon animals, helium balloons, balloon bouquets, water balloons, and then there is always the classic balloon you blow up from an itty-bitty latex balloon shaped material. Balloons all have one thing in common, they were a patent for just a couple of inventors. Have you ever wondered who made the first balloon? Well I'm about to tell you. The very first rubber balloon was invented by Michael Faraday in the year 1824. It was an experiment at the Royal Institution in London. A year later toy balloons were introduced by Thomas Hancock. His idea contained a do-it-yourself kit, where you made your balloon. It contained a bottle of rubber solution and a condensing syringe

Balloon Art

As I promised I have returned to the ever fateful paragraph about balloon art. Balloon art is a very easy task to achieve. Balloon art includes everything from blowing up balloons to the balloon animals you twist and create in your room to what the clowns do at the circus. Everyone has seen a balloon and most people like them. Balloon art has been around for decades and almost everyone has done some kind of balloon art.

Your Balloons

Balloons are incredibly enjoyable, so have fun and Be creative.
