

Uses for Wool Fabric

Wool fabric is used for all kinds of clothing, couch covers, bedspreads, toilet covers, tablecloths, and more. People who can sew use wool fabric for most of their creations because it is sold by the yard and is available in most craft stores. There are different types of wool fabric that is used for different purposes. Learning to sew is more than just putting pieces of cloth together, it is about knowing which fabrics to use for different projects and which fabrics will work the best. Professional seamstresses have studied with others to learn how to create clothing and other items that are beautiful, functional, and timeless.

Wool fabric has been used for centuries. Greek soldiers used wool felt to add comfort to their helmets, while villagers used wool to make clothing and bags for traveling. Wool, which is made from the hair of animals, has to be spun in order to become yard. Up to twenty strands of animal hair are used to create wool fabric. The threads are woven into fabric that can then be cut to make clothing, rugs, audio speaker coverings, and much more. The more the wool is spun, the softer it will get. Wool that is very soft is also very valuable. Those who can create items with this wool are very talented.

Wool fabric is also used to line boxes, shelving, and other surfaces that need to be softer so that items are placed on top of or inside of will not break. More and more uses for wool fabric are discovered every day. Bedding and blankets are also created using wool or a blend of different fabrics that includes wool. Wool can keep heat from escaping because it is denser than other fabrics. But clothing still seems to be the most popular when it comes to using wool. Most active wear is made from wool blended fabric. Shirts, pants, dresses, ties, skirts, and jackets can be made from wool. The fabric is east to clean and will last for many years. It is recommended that wool blend clothing be washed in cold water to prevent shrinking. Other clothing items may have to be dry cleaned instead. This will help the item retain its shape so that it can be worm many more times. Wool fabric helps to keep people warm during the winter months and is very comfortable to wear indoors and outdoors.
