

Military Communication During Government Deployments

Your spouse has recently been deployed, Again. You are trying to juggle all of your responsibilities, stay sane and stay in touch while he or she is overseas. You are already stressed out over the fact that your loved one will be gone for such a long time and now you find out there is no cheap way to stay in touch. It looks like you will have to limit your phone calls, or does it?

While your soldier is overseas; whether it be Iraq, Kuwait, Korea, Germany or elsewhere family and friends need to know that calling him or her does not have to be an expensive or stressful ordeal, nor should it be. Over the years the U.S. Military has deployed to several locations overseas and many soldiers have enjoyed low rate Military International phone cards. It is important for you to know that there are companies out there that really do care about our armed forces and want to provide them with the lowest possible international phone card rates during their deployment.

Choosing the right soldier calling card should not be a hassle either. Unfortunately, phone services provided by the military could be considered by some as a monopoly. In many locations in which our soldiers deploy phone centers are set up in which a soldier must pay high rates to contact their loved ones. When there is little to no resources to choose from many soldiers resort to the expensive phone centers in order to speak with their friends and family at home.

There is always the PX right? The Post Exchange is an alternative to the phone centers but they to offer only calling cards provided by one or two companies. These companies may not have gotten picked up by the PX because of their quality it may have had something to do with the price they have to pay and the profit made.

If you do a little research, ask some questions and read more articles much like this one, you just might find a calling card company that will provide you with the service you expect as a service member or Dependant at a very low price. Once you find the military international calling card that provides you with the service you expect at a good price, be sure to let your friends know so that they can enjoy the no stress, no hassle communication with their loved ones as well.
