

Creating A Winning Plus Size Wardrobe on A Budget

It doesn't matter what kind of style you prefer, there are thousands of designers out there who can make you feel like the most beautiful person in the world... for a hefty price! But, most of us out there just can't afford those high prices. And, if you're a plus size, it seems like the prices are just downright unrealistic. So, what do you do? You still want to look like a million bucks, you just don't want to spend it. Here are some ideas to help you build a winning plus size wardrobe on a low-key budget:

1. Watch the papers. While it might be boring, or depressing, looking through the ads each week to see what is on sale, and where, it does help. Finding a great sale at a department store on great clothes is always something to take in. Usually, where there is one sale, there are other stores trying to compete for business as well, so shop around the stores nearby, and you can find some great deals on all the wonderful clothes that you long for.
2. Don't shop in season. This is a big one. Shop after the season is over for the next year. While this might sound like a waste of time and money, you will be amazed at the clothes that you can find dirt cheap because the store doesn't want to take a loss on them. Most of the clothes can be worn during the season that you are in now anyway, you just won't get to wear them as often. You will also be surprised at the fashions that will carry over to the next year also. The only key to this is not to buy anything that is part of a fad, like lime-green snake skin shirts or neon pink wooden sandals. Stick to things that are a neutral color, like black, white, brown, gray, and some primary colors to mix in, and things that are classy, and you will never go wrong with your spree.
3. Look through the consignment shops in town. While there are those that you should never go in, there are also those that carry only designer clothes. These can be great resources to enhance your wardrobe now if you are in serious need of new clothes, or you just want something new to wear. Consignment shops are great because you don't pay new prices for the clothes but you still can find designer names and brands to sport around. Just make sure that you look the garment over carefully to ensure that you don't end up with something seriously faded, ripped, torn, or stained. You don't want to purchase a new power suit only to find that there is a wine stain on the jacket and you can't return it, or get the stain out.

These are just a few tips to get you started building that great plus size wardrobe on a small budget. Within no time, you will be finding your own ways of modifying these tips to fit your style and preferences, and you will look great doing it! Happy shopping!

Source: <http://www.articlecircle.com>

About the Author

Author Jerry Cahill is publisher and webmaster. Please review his web site for more information at <http://www.clothinglarge.com/>