

Computer Surveillance, The Facts

If you are responsible for a company's computer network, you may need to install computer surveillance software. If you have children and are concerned about their Internet usage habits, you may also want to install surveillance or monitoring software. Those who feel the need to know their spouse's computer habits can also easily find out what's going on.

Businesses run on mission critical applications and computer security remains a top priority. Concern over what your employees may be doing online that could breach that security is a growing concern. Companies have the ability to also judge whether or not their employees are productive by monitoring what they're doing without their knowledge.

If your marriage or relationship feels like it may be being jeopardized by things your spouse may be doing on the Internet, you may need to know for a fact what they are doing in order to get peace of mind or the truth to allow you to make a decision about the future of that relationship.

Computer monitoring software is a valuable tool that tracks every single keystroke on a computer. It can also take a snapshot of the screen as often as you command it to and send all this information in a neat and tidy e-mail report to you so you can review it and see exactly what's happening.

Programs will run unobtrusively in the background of the computer you would like to monitor. This program hides in the background undetected and logs everything you tell it to. It can track down website usage, chat conversations, copies of every file, every password and every downloaded image. This program will send you the information as often as you wish without the knowledge of the person using that computer. This information could be valuable in helping you:

- Run your business
- Parent your children effectively and safely
- Know the truth about your marriage or relationship.

Children are faced with bullying and online predators constantly online. Some children don't tell their parents when they run into trouble. Some children carry on internet conversations with who they perceive to be other children but that may be pedophiles.

Spouses sometimes carry on Internet based relationships or participate in pornographic activities online. This may be something you need to know to help you in your relationship.

Companies who need details on their staffers' habits can greatly benefit from this type of software that will tell them everything they need to know about who is productive and who is not and when unwelcome behavior occurs at the office.

This type of software will give you valuable information to deal with various problem situations and can easily be used from the novice right up to and including a technical person.

Source: <http://www.articlecircle.com>

About the Author

Total Innovations, Inc. specializes in developing award winning software programs designed to solve computer users needs. The Emailspy computer monitoring software, www.spyblaster.com & www.folderhider.com are a few of the most recent. See full details at: <http://www.emailspy.com>