

Speed Reading Is A Requirement Not An Option

Speed reading has in the past been thought of as a way to get a leg up on the competition. In today's competitive business world you may need to go one step further as more and more people have realized the importance of this skill in maintaining their marketability and competitive edge within current job markets. Being competitive is more important now than ever before as far as the professional 'white collar' job market goes.

Speed reading is no longer just a way to cram for big exams such as finals or the SATs. Speed reading has become a necessity in the business world as well as in the world of education and self improvement. More and more people are signing up to take courses online, at local community colleges, and at local community support groups not only to improve their reading speeds, but also the rate at which they accurately comprehend the materials they are reading.

Many people are combining courses and constantly working to improve their reading times and their rate of comprehension. We've become a jeopardy world where everyone maintains copious amounts of useless trivia rattling around in our brains in order to come out at unexpected times and really offer little of value to anyone other than ourselves. However, we all know that there is no such thing as bad knowledge so we constantly educate ourselves in the hopes that someday, some little bit of knowledge will unlock the doors to wealth, riches, and even more knowledge in our lives.

If you are looking for a speed reading course in order to improve your skills, I recommend courses in which you are doing more than reading tips and advice. There are many that offer software, games, and other boosters to help you learn to read faster. I'm a bit skeptical of the idea of simply reading a list of suggestions in order to improve your reading comprehension as well as your reading speed.

If you have a local group that meets in order to 'compete' or offer that little bit of competitive edge as far as speed reading goes, this is an excellent motivator for those that need a little push or friendly competition in order to really get into the swing of things. Having some degree of accountability whether to yourself or others always seems to help and offer that extra little nudge to do things faster the next time. It's easier to compete with others however, than it is to compete with yourself so group events are a great way to encourage you to display marked improvements in your speed reading abilities.

Keep in mind that if one method doesn't seem to be working for you, you should try another rather than giving up all together. No two brains are alike and it sometimes takes a bit of trial and error before you find that one way of putting things that resonates within you and makes sense. The gift of speed reading is a great gift to give yourself so don't give up or give in too easily.

Source: <http://www.articlecircle.com>

About the Author

For more info on speed reading, please visit our website. <http://www.1st-speed-reading.com>