

Tailoring - The Truth About Our Clothes

It certainly is easy to wear clothes and show them off then to make them. It travels a long way from field to yarn to fabric to cloth and a lot more till it finally takes the form of what we slip into in a fraction of a minute. Your head would begin to whirl if you were to count the figures of the yarn alone. The warp, the weft and the spinning of yarns into threads is a complicated but fun to know process. Once these yarn balls after getting multiple chemical treatment is spun into fabric is when the creativity begins.

Most of the tailoring is done through machinery. Technological changes have helped manufacturers to a great extent. The whole circulation procedure is extremely rapid. The reason of which is that the population increase gives rise to an increased demand, and when demand increases supply needs to amplify. When the production grows too much it loses its value. The quality drops and 30 percent out of what the entire production is worth some quality.

The niche markets that targets specific customers are more expensive because they unlike the mass production and tailoring of clothes offer handmade dresses. It goes the other way round now; handmade clothes are exquisite and more demanded by the upper class. Anything that is rare is always valuable.

Tailoring of clothes by the hand is again in fashion. The plain, dull, lifeless shirts are decorated in many ways. When clothes are handmade you can have them fit the way you want. A stroke of brush with fabric paint, a print by the blocks and the like can beautify something ordinary.

Designer have the upper hand on the factory made dresses. They are decorated with beads, sparklers, laces and sequences. It takes a whole lot of creativity to produce some intricate patterns. The pant borders are embodied with beads and the cuts are filled with tussles. There are diamonds and pearl hangings and so much more that adorns the dresses. Artists and textile designers are changing their fields into fashion designing. Owing to Globalization designers have been able to exchange their views and ideas. They travel in order to seek the possible outcomes of intermingling trends. It is hard to differentiate between the clothing styles of different countries. The over all trend and tradition is to wear anything that looks good and presentable in public.

Source: <http://www.articlecircle.com>

About the Author

Kadence Buchanan writes articles for <http://allkindsofclothing.com/> - In addition, Kadence also writes articles for <http://iclothingcenter.com/> and <http://letstalkaboutbeauty.com/>