

Exploring Lasik Eye Surgery

For millions of Americans everyday the burden of poor vision has been difficult. Finding new ways to gain freedom from eye wear was a hope we often clung too. However now people are seeing clearly for the first time without the use of glasses and contacts. Lasik Eye surgery is bringing new life to many across the country.

Lasik eye surgery is the most common refractive procedure in the United States today. Lasik eye Surgery or (Laser-Assisted In Situ Keratomileusis) is done by creating a small circular flap in the cornea. They will then use the excimer laser to remove gently break the modular bonds of the cornea to reshape the cornea. This will help you see clearer and can give you better vision in as little as 1 day.

The cost of Lasik surgery can often discourage many people. But how much is it worth to you to have your vision restored? The Lasik procedure can help people with nearsightedness and farsightedness. It can also help correct astigmatism.

After the Procedure-

As with all surgeries the doctor will keep you a bit in the office. They will request when you return home to get lots of rest. It is important for you to not touch or rub the eye because that can dislodge the flap and can create complications.

You may feel ok within a matter of hours but you should get rest because your vision may still be blurry. It is important for you to take it easy for the first week much of our balance is coordinated with our eyes and doing things too quickly can also create complications.

Some people may still require glasses or contacts after surgery for vision however the prescription will not be as strong. Also there maybe some complications later and you may need what is called a "touch up". Below are some complications common in Lasik:

- Dry eye
- Infection
- Irritated eyes
- Scratchy eyes
- Irregular flap
- Over/under correction

It is important to find a qualified eye surgeon to assist you in this procedure. Making sure they have experience in this field will ease your mind and reduce the chance of complications. There are many available Online and you can find many by look up Lasik Los Angeles. As with all procedures there will be some risks. However if you are serious about your vision and want to be free from your glasses or contact lenses Lasik eye surgery could be right for you.
