A personal loan can be further classified into a secured and an unsecured loan. The main difference between the two is that one is obtained with a collateral and the other without the collateral. But the purpose of the loan remains the same, that is to realise personal needs. As secured loan is obtained by pledging a collateral such as a house, a car, property or anything of value, on failure of repayment of loan amount the borrower runs the risk of confiscation of the collateral. But at the same time a secured personal loan will come to a borrower at a low APR(Annual Percentage Rate) and a larger amount of loan will be sanctioned due to the collateral laid out to the lender in the form of security. Since the lender has some amount of security to claim back his loan amount he easily offers loan to the borrower. The better the value of collateral that is the equity the better the loan terms gets. If one is unwilling to part away his collateral for fear of not being able to make the payments on time and losing out on his collateral can always opt for the unsecured personal loan. But he would miss out on the benefits of a secured personal loan at the same time. One can make the decision of opting out of the two sort of personal loan based one the value of the collateral he possesses. That's precisely the benefit that one would share with a personal loan. With this one now gets a fair idea of what's the secret to obtaining a good personal loan deal.
