

Dating for Adults (Not Dummies)

Adult dating is far different from teenage dating in many terms. One is adult dating tends to be more "allowed" or need not be blessed with the permission of a parent, a guardian or just any older companion of the daters. Another is that adult dating is not as impulsive as teenage dating. With those attributes of adult dating, here are a few tips on how to make the most out of adult dating.

1. Relish your freedom. Unlike before, when peer and family pressure could really get in your nerves, now you have the hand and the mind to choose whom to date, when to go out on a date and where to go. Who knows? This could be your first time to finally have a say on these matters, right? Better maximize it by being your best-looking and think of good thoughts to emanate that adult dating-ready come-hither look!

2. If you have long mourned a divorce or split-up, better lighten up that long face. Stop slouching on your couch and work it! If it feels like it's high time to savor another company or relationship, by all means, entertain that feeling. It's not like you're getting married again on your new adult dating endeavor.

3. Better off alone. Remember that time when you go out with your clique and nobody seems to notice you? Nah, you're just too guarded. With adult dating, you are advised to consider that now is the time that you go out a bit more often. And please do yourself a big favor. Do go out all by yourself. Don't wait others to do the first move. But don't look too desperate doing those overtures.

4. Ever played a serious game? Adult dating is tantamount to playing a serious game. What an oxymoron, you say? It just fits that description well since looking for a new partner in your adulthood is not supposed to be as playful as when you're young but you still have to have some fun while carrying out adult dating.

5. Keep the tricks at bay. In playing the adult dating game seriously, no tricks or manipulations are allowed. Just like in teen dating, manipulating anyone can backfire. Be yourself to attract those who are worthy to invest a good relationship with. Look for the one who likes the real you.

6. That's entertainment. If someone's exerting effort and spending money to date you, he surely deserves a treat. Simply bringing up a fun and engaging conversation will do it. If he's into it, an intellectually stimulating talk won't hurt. No clowning or contortionist's moves allowed.

7. Flash your most sunny smile. No, you don't have to keep on smiling like Playboy bunny. (As if bunnies really smile that much.) What I mean is, save that lustworthy grin on the next stages of your adult dating. But if the timing is right and you both got it burning... hey? As long as you show your most approachable side, to what it leads to needs not much discussion really. But remember the tip number five!

8. Don't break dates. If you prefer to do something else, re-schedule! Don't cancel dates. Be fine with changing partners. It's a part of the adult dating game.

With those suggestions, now you are more armed with adult dating tactics and ethics. Never forget that in an adult dating game, nobody becomes a loser. One just has to keep on playing to win. Have fun!

Source: <http://www.articlecircle.com>

About the Author

Eric Seminara looks to share his life with others and when it's that someone special, it's nice to give flowers as well as receive them. Visit <http://www.officialsendflowers.com> to send somebody flowers and make them smile :-)